COMING TRIP WILL TELL FIGHT-HUNGRY CHICAGO

Fans Should Wait Until Nationals Get Through Tryout—Old Men Will Improve. Admirers of Pugilism in Windy City Bail Bouts for Frisco—Schreck and Hart.

By THOMAS S. RICE. By CHIP.

Tomorrow morning the Washington club starts on its first real trip away from home. It will return to play Detroit here on May 11, the beginning of the long series with the Western clubs which will last until May 25, the last game with Cleveland on that exchange of courtesies between East and West. After the Cleveland series the club goes to New York for May 29 and the double-header on Decoration Day, then jumps to Boston for May 31 and June 1 and 2. The first Western series opens with Detroit in Detroit on June 4.

Will Be Real Test.

The itinerary of the trip beginning tomorrow will be Philadelphia tomorrow and next day, Boston on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, and New York on May 7, 8, 9, and 10.

This first Eastern trip should be a real test for the Washington club, but you never can tell. Baseball has so many queer angles that he who predicts positively needs a guardian. Last year Washington went on the road on this same Eastern trip, cleaned up everything in sight, came back home and did some more prize-winning stunts, then went West only to strike a grouse tohogany that landed it at the bottom on July 4 with a sickening thud.

This erratic course of the club last year is partially explainable, so that no matter what past performances have been the fans will be largely guided by what happens between tomorrow and Friday of next week, when the club will return to its own ballfield.

Looks Pretty Good.

While only the most hectic and excitable of rooters has anticipated that Washington would finish better than a low berth in the first division and predictions of that rare fortune have been attributed to a too free drawing on the pipe, still, it is not a bad guess to say that with an even run of luck Washington will surprise some of the wise ones who are born pessimists. It is not a world-beating team, and it is not a major league pennant winner, but it is a good ball team, and so far this season has always given a run for the money.

Last year the team started out with so many youngsters that when it got to a strange city it had to get a guide to show it the way to the ball park. With all these minor leaguers and so much untried material it started with a whoop and for a while led the American League to the great astonishment of certain misguided local knockers who expected to see the club duplicate the remarkable performance of the year before when it dropped thirteen straight games.

Youngsters Exploded.

It was prophesied, and with good reason, as subsequent events proved, that the Washington team was more or less of a false alarm, and that when the season advanced the old-timers on the other clubs struck their stride. Washington would descend. That was exactly what happened. The youngsters couldn't stand the pace, and they collapsed in most alarming fashion.

Then came a change. Hickman and Anderson were obtained, the pitchers took a new lease on life, and for the last two months of the season the club won more games than it lost.

This year Washington should also profit by that pace-getting lapse of time. On the team are such veterans as Hickman, Anderson, Lave Cross, and Kittredge. Also, every pitcher whom it will really rely upon in emergency is a major leaguer of many years' standing who frankly confesses that it will be some weeks before he rounds into shape. Give 'em a Chance.

If the club has obtained a slightly different flying start at present; is there any reason to believe that as the days go by it should blow up as badly as it did last year? Is it not better prepared to stand the grueling grind than the outfit of 1905, which was composed of men fit to be in the major league at all, much less hold a position well up in the pennant race? The answer would seem to be yes, and while the whole argument may go to pot because of a slump setting in at any moment, the team is certainly entitled to the benefit of the doubt as long as it furnishes the class of ball it has for the past ten days.

Washington has had a tail-end team so long that if the slightest streak of ill-luck comes along the family of 1-to-10-you-so brothers becomes so large that the District has to annex a part of Virginia and Maryland to hold them. The defeat yesterday started another bunch of the I-knew-they-wouldn't-last hammerheads, but wait until something serious happens before making yourself muscle bound by too much exercise on the anvils.

WESTERN BOAT CLUBS TO HOLD OPEN REGATTA

DULUTH, April 28.—Duluth will have an open regatta this summer. This was decided at a meeting of the directors of the Duluth Boat Club.

July will see the twentieth anniversary of the incorporation of the club, and the directors decided that some means of celebrating the event should be adopted. A regatta was chosen as the most appropriate form, and on or about July 19 a regatta will be held in the harbor, to which clubs in other cities in the Northwest will be invited to send crews.

The regatta will be similar to the one held last summer, when Winnepig and St. Paul crews were in attendance, but it will be on a much larger scale, with four or five clubs represented instead of three.

Jack Hamilton, got an awful beating at Montreal from Young Donohue, of New York.

Another old-timer came back into the limelight during the past week. Tim Callahan took on a new lease of life, and bested George Decker, accounted a pretty good man at Philadelphia.

Jeffries made a big hit on his rear-ender, boxing two rounds each with Jack Root and Dan Long. The big fellow showed that he had lost but little of his old-time speed and none of his hitting powers, as Long, who is very busy at his home town, San Francisco, immediately went soaring and even Jeffries' friends were forced to acknowledge that the California lightweight will have to extend himself to the utmost when he meets the Easterner.

The Frisco relief benefit that takes place here next Friday will fill a long list with Chicago's fight-hungry fans. The relief benefit will be a battle between Hugo Kelly and Dave Barry at 160 pounds, and Benny Yanger and Dick Hyland, of San Francisco, lightweight. It is hard to say which contest is exciting the greater interest, but it is a well-settled fact that the big collection will be jammed with a crowd of fight-lovers, who for months have been forced to content themselves with surreptitious barn scraps.

At a similar affair in New York next Thursday, Mike Schreck and Martin Hart will meet in a four-round go, which is heralded as the initial event of many others that are expected to be pulled off there if somebody does not slip a cog. The meeting between Schreck and Hart is bound to be a warm one, as Hart is crazy to regain his prestige, lost through his defeat by Tommy Burns, while Schreck is equally anxious to maintain his winning streak.

George Gardner was to have been Hart's opponent in this event, but his showing with Schreck at Lowell last week was so bad that he was dropped for the New York bout and Schreck substituted. The latter, who returned here before leaving for New York, said while here that poor Gardner was all in and almost helpless.

There will be a little fracas pulled off at Peoria next Thursday between the youngsters, the winner of which is liable to be heard from among the topnotchers one of these days. The boys in question are Grover Hayes and George Williams, both of whom have shown remarkable form lately. They know Hayes down in Philadelphia. When the bottom dropped out in his native Chicago, Grover made his way to the Quaker City. How he got there is another story. Once arrived, however, he speedily established a standing by polishing off Philadelphia's "prelim" boxers about as fast as they could be produced. Generally, however, was a knockout. Young Williams has had nearly as spectacular a career lately, although his efforts have been confined to Peoria and thereabouts.

Jimmy Gardner and Jack O'Keefe fought an unsatisfactory draw at Kalamazoo Wednesday night. Under ordinary circumstances the decision would have gone to Gardner as he outpointed the Chicagoan and once or twice had him nearly out. As it was, the crowd did not come up to expectations and accordingly the men agreed to fight two-minute rounds, with a draw if both were on their feet at the end. O'Keefe managed to stay on his pins long enough to get equal honors but it took his life to do it.

There is talk of a meeting between Bob Fitzsimmons and Kid McCoy, but it is hardly probable that it is to be taken seriously. Fitz is still in fair shape, possibly, but the once mighty "Kid" has been out of it for some time and could hardly stand training at this late date. There was a time, however, not so many years back, when a match between these two fisty stars would have been a tremendous card for any promoter.

Roseben Quits Badly Before Merry Lark

Excelsior Favorite Finished Fifth—Ormonde's Right, After Gallant Effort, Finishes Second. Ram's Horn a Sick Horse.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Merry Lark, with Miller up, took the measure of Roseben in the Excelsior Handicap, and did not have to more than half unfold the tape line of his speed, either, to win by a length and a half from Ormonde's Right, which was second, a length before the 20-to-1 shot, Eugenia Burch.

With climbing stride and the white feather plainly showing in his whole bearing, Roseben, the 3-to-5 favorite, was an indifferent fifth.

Roseben Quit.

Hermitage went away from the barrier with a lightning burst of speed, and kept Roseben company to the half, with Merry Lark at his heels. At the far turn Hermitage was done, and for an instant Roseben held a lead of two lengths. It was the last flicker of the dying flame. Merry Lark ranged up in the eye for a second or two, and then plainly, almost as if he had spoken, Roseben indicated his collapse.

Ormonde's Right closed grimly through the stretch. Struggle as he might, Ormonde's Right could not get up, and Merry Lark maintained his lead, a handy winner. Eugenia Burch ran a good race behind Roseben.

Ram's Horn Sick.

Ram's Horn and his stablemate, Phil Finch, were early withdrawn from the big race. The former has a temperature of 102 and is a very sick horse, which probably accounts for his failure in the Stirling Stakes.

The Blair Painter-Andrew Miller combination, which controls Merry Lark, won handsomely. They held their commission back until Merry Lark's price had soared from 8 to 15 to 1. Then they sent it in in chunks, and at post time 19 to 1 was the very best to be had. There was something of a sensation when Alex Shields' three-year-old Halifax fairly two-roped Lady Amelia in the handicap with only 200 pounds up. Halifax ran to the front as if he could run just as fast as he wanted, and with nothing on his back, he won easily.

Excelsior favorite, in the opening race, and Mary Morris ran away from Varieties in the Fifth.

Blue Dale was one public choice that got home without effort.
